1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the former Yugoslavia Since 1991 (“Appeals Chamber” and “Tribunal”, respectively) is seized of an interlocutory appeal filed by Slobodan Praljak’s (“Appellant”) on 30 July 2008¹ against the decision rendered by Trial Chamber III (“Trial Chamber”) on 26 June 2008.² The Office of the Prosecutor (“Prosecution”) filed its response on 8 August 2008.³ The Appellant did not file a reply.

I. BACKGROUND

2. On 10 May 2007, during the presentation of the Prosecution’s case, the Trial Chamber issued the “Decision on the Mode of Interrogating Witnesses” stating, inter alia, that witnesses “shall primarily be questioned by counsel of the [Appellant]” and that the Appellant may only directly address a witness “[i]n exceptional circumstances and after authorisation of the Chamber”.⁴ This decision was confirmed by the Appeals Chamber on 24 August 2007, in relation to Guideline C covering the Appellant’s participation in the questioning of witnesses.⁵ The Appeals Chamber was in particular satisfied that “there was good reason for the Trial Chamber to determine that a stricter application of Guideline C was justified in order to protect the rights of the Appellant’s co-accused to a fair and expeditious trial, as well as the rights of the Appellant” notably in light of the experience of the Appellant’s interventions which lacked legal expertise and entailed a waste of time.⁶

3. On 24 April 2008, the Trial Chamber issued the “Decision Adopting Guidelines for the Presentation of Defence Evidence”.⁷ According to Guideline 1 of this decision, the Appellant may only directly examine a witness with the leave of the Trial Chamber and under exceptional circumstances in particular related to the examination of events in which he personally took part or to the examination of issues about which he has specific expertise.⁸

4. In the Impugned Decision, the Trial Chamber denied, by a majority, the Appellant’s motion⁹ seeking reconsideration of Guideline 1 and authorisation to cross-examine witnesses about the events in which he personally took part or questions of which he has specific expertise. The Trial Chamber furthermore provided, by a majority, its explanation of the “specific expertise” criterion as referring to “the expertise held by an Accused at the time of the alleged facts an owing to which he was charged in the Amended Indictment of 11 June 2008”.¹⁰ On 23 July 2008, the Trial Chamber granted the Appellant’s request¹¹ for certification to appeal the Impugned Decision.¹²

II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

5. It is well-established in the jurisprudence of the Tribunal that the Trial Chambers exercise discretion in relation to trial management and the conduct of proceedings before them.¹³ In the present case, the Impugned Decision’s holding to provide further explanation in relation to Guideline 1 is a discretionary decision of the Trial Chamber, to which the Appeals Chamber accords deference. This deference is based on the Appeals Chamber’s recognition of the Trial Chamber’s familiarity with the day-to-day conduct of the parties and practical demands of the case.¹⁴ The Appeals Chamber’s examination is therefore limited to establishing whether the Trial Chamber abused its discretion by committing a discernible error.¹⁵ The Appeals Chamber will only overturn a Trial Chamber’s exercise of its discretion where it is found to be (1) based on an incorrect interpretation of governing law; (2) based on a patently incorrect conclusion of fact; or (3) so unfair or unreasonable as to constitute an abuse of discretion.¹⁶

III. DISCUSSION

A. Arguments of the Parties

6. The Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to reverse the Impugned Decision or, in the alternative, “to hold that ‘specific expertise’ as described [therein] includes at a minimum the areas of expertise specifically listed in the Indictment”.¹⁷ He tends to interpret the Impugned Decision as restricting him from examining a witness on any issues, except the military issue, whereas he claims to have specific competencies in electrical engineering, philosophy, sociology and theatrical, film and television production.¹⁸ He further submits that there is no basis for the arbitrary and artificial restriction on the definition of “specific expertise” provided by the Trial Chamber in the Impugned Decision.¹⁹ He finally adds that the circumstances have changed since the Appeals Chamber has last had the opportunity to rule on this matter and that a “more comprehensive re[-]evaluation of the issue” is therefore warranted.²⁰

7. As his first ground of appeal, the Appellant argues that the Impugned Decision, in conjunction with the layout of the courtroom which prevents the Accused from communicating with his Counsel during the witnesses’ examination and the complexity of the issues analyzed during the proceedings, results in a violation of his right to a fair hearing guaranteed by Article 21(2) of the Statute of the Tribunal (“Statute”).²¹ In support of this argument, the Appellant gives two examples where his expertise would be essential to the examination of witnesses. First, he refers to his intention to call a witness who would testify that it was physically impossible for the Herceg-Bosna/HVO authorities to cut off water and power supplies to East Mostar, as alleged by the Prosecution.²² He claims that his personal expertise in this area is significantly greater than his Counsel’s and that preventing him from immediately following up on such complex and technical issues would result in a miscarriage of justice.²³ Second, the Appellant submits that he might need to intervene on the issue of sociology as he did on 30 August 2007, when he was authorized by the Trial Chamber to cross-examine a witness on a question of demography.²⁴

²⁴ Ibid., paras 29-32.

8. Under the second ground of appeal, the Appellant develops his arguments according to which “a rationale must be provided when making a blanket restriction on the full use of the [Appellant’s] expertise”, especially in the circumstances where the Trial Chamber already has sufficient control over the modes of interrogating the witnesses available to the Appellant.²⁵

9. In his third ground of appeal, the Appellant alleges that the Impugned Decision violates his rights and guarantees under Article 21(4)(d) of the Statute. He submits that the existing restrictions imposed by the Trial Chamber’s Decision of 10 May 2007 already leave him with only a “bare minimum”, a further restriction of which would lead to the violation of his defence rights.²⁶ The Appellant further argues that the “presence of defence counsel cannot be used to penalize the Accused” and that it is inappropriate to use the right to an expeditious trial as “a weapon” against him provided that none of the accused in the present case has invoked this right.²⁷

10. The Appellant’s fourth and fifth grounds of appeal deal with the alleged violations of Articles 21(4)(e) and 21(4)(g) of the Statute, respectively. He particularly underlines that the requirement for the Appellant to demonstrate “how he employed his expertise in relation to the facts alleged in the Indictment in order to enjoy his basic right to participate in the proceedings” might be construed as self-incriminating.²⁸

11. Finally, the sixth ground of appeal contains arguments according to which the Impugned Decision is factually incorrect as it can be interpreted as recognizing that the Appellant only has specific expertise in the military domain.²⁹

12. The Prosecution responds that the Appeal should be rejected inasmuch as it (i) raises a new issue that has not been certified for appeal; (ii) reiterates the arguments previously litigated before the Appeals Chamber; (iii) is based on an attempt to extend the notion of “specific expertise” to biographical information set out in the Indictment; and (iv) refuses to recognize the existing rulings by the Trial and Appeals Chambers.³⁰

13. In support of its arguments, the Prosecution firstly submits that the Impugned Decision as well as all preceding motions and rulings only related to the right of an accused to personally conduct cross-examination of witnesses called by other parties.³¹ The Certification Decision thus only allowed an appeal in connection with the Appellant’s participation in the cross-examination of those witnesses, as opposed to examination-in-chief of witnesses called by him, which is a new matter impermissibly brought before the Appeals Chamber.³²

14. Secondly, the Prosecution submits that the arguments of the Appellant were previously considered and rejected by the Appeals Chamber and that the situation has not changed since then in any meaningful way in the sense that the Appellant is still able, under certain circumstances, to cross-examine the witnesses called by his co-accused.³³

15. Thirdly, the Prosecution argues that the Trial Chamber's elaboration of "specific expertise" is not a departure from the original guidelines, and that any alleged violation of the Appellant's rights in this regard is at best hypothetical given that the Trial Chamber has not yet had an opportunity to apply the definition spelled out in the Impugned Decision.³⁴ The Prosecution adds that the educational and professional background information contained in the Indictment is simply biographical and does not amount to the Prosecution's acknowledgement of the Appellant's "specific expertise" in those spheres.³⁵

16. Finally, the Prosecution asserts that, throughout his authorized interventions, the Appellant has demonstrated that he "still lacks the skill to conduct a proper cross-examination" and that those interventions have not assisted the court but rather wasted time.³⁶ In this regard, the Prosecution claims that the Appellant wilfully disregards the procedural rules imposed by the Trial Chamber.³⁷

B. Analysis

1. Scope of Appeal

17. The Appeals Chamber notes that the Certification Decision reads as follows:

[...] the Impugned Decision made an important clarification with regard to the limitations placed on an Accused to personally examine a witness,

[...] the Chamber holds that limiting the right of Accused persons assisted by Counsel to participate directly in the examination of witnesses by construing the rights as enshrined in Article 21(4)(d) and (e) of the Statute is an issue that would significantly affect the fairness of the trial,³⁸

18. Although it is true that the issue at stake initially arose at the stage when the Appellant was participating in cross-examination of witnesses called by the Prosecution and/or his co-accused, a plain reading of the Certification Decision makes it clear that the Trial Chamber certified an appeal against the Impugned Decision with respect to the more general right of an accused to participate in the examination (including examination-in-chief, cross-examination or re-examination) of witnesses called by any party. Moreover, the Impugned Decision provides clarification to Guideline 1, which in turn stipulates the order of the examination of witnesses called by either party.³⁹ The Appeals Chamber therefore rejects the Prosecution's arguments claiming that the Appeal contains impermissibly new issues that were not certified for appeal.

2. Alleged Errors

19. The Appeals Chamber has already held that when an accused is effectively represented by counsel, it is, in principle, for the counsel to conduct the examination of witnesses.⁴⁰ It has however recognized that Trial Chambers may, under exceptional circumstances, authorize an accused to participate in the examination in person.⁴¹ It has also been established that the Trial Chambers are entitled under Rule 90(F) of the Tribunal's Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules") to exercise control over the manner in which such examination is conducted,⁴² including ensuring that it "is not impeded by useless and irrelevant questions".⁴³

20. As recalled above, in its Decision of 24 April 2008, the Trial Chamber stated that the exceptional circumstances under which the Appellant would be allowed to address a witness directly during the presentation of defence evidence "relate in particular to the examination of events in which an Accused participated personally, or the examination of issues about which he possesses specific expertise".⁴⁴ In the Impugned Decision, the Trial Chamber dismissed the Appellant's request for reconsideration of these criteria and went further to define "specific expertise” as referring to “the expertise held by an Accused at the time of the alleged facts and owing to which he was charged in the Amended Indictment of 11 June 2008”.⁴⁵ The Appeals Chamber is not satisfied that it needs to reconsider its decision of 24 August 2007 approving a stricter application of Guideline C which the Trial Chamber has now decided to continue to apply to examination of witnesses called by the Appellant or his co-accused.⁴⁶ In these circumstances, the real issue currently before the Appeals Chamber is whether the Trial Chamber committed a discernable error in defining those “exceptional circumstances” by providing its clarification of the term “specific expertise”.

21. The ordinary meaning of the term “expertise” involves “skill or expertness in a particular branch of study or sport”.⁴⁷ The clarification provided in the Impugned Decision limits the possibility of the Appellant’s personal participation in the examination of witnesses with respect to issues on which he has specific expertise to instances where he can prove that it existed at the time of the facts alleged in the Indictment and underlies the charges listed therein. The Appeals Chamber reiterates that it is within the Trial Chamber’s discretionary power to define the circumstances under which it can allow the Appellant to intervene in the examination of witnesses. However, it did not need, at this stage of the proceedings, to further restrict the criteria that would apply to all his future requests for personal intervention. Although the Trial Chamber based its decision on its experience concerning previous interventions of the Appellant, the Appeals Chamber considers that the Trial Chamber should have allowed more flexibility for its assessment of the notion of specific expertise and perform such assessment on a case-by-case basis when faced with a specific request. The approach taken by the Trial Chamber could potentially lead to violation of the Appellant’s rights under Article 21 of the Statute and thus constitutes an abuse of discretion.

22. Moreover, the Appeals Chamber emphasizes that both Guideline C (as amended by the Trial Chamber’s Decision of 10 May 2007) and Guideline 1 refer to “exceptional circumstances” which relate in particular to the events in which the Appellant participated personally or issues falling within his specific expertise, and should therefore not be read as restricting those circumstances to ⁴⁷ Oxford English Dictionary Online, Oxford University Press, <http://dictionary.oed.com> (last updated on 12 June 2008) (“Oxford English Dictionary Online”). The term “expertness” is, in turn, defined as “experience, thorough knowledge” or “skill derived from practice” (ibid.). The Appeals Chamber notes that the French original of the Impugned Decision uses the term “compétence” which is defined as “capacité, fondée sur un savoir ou une expérience, que l’on reconnaît à une personne” (Dictionnaire de l’Académie française, 9^e édition, version informatisée, <http://atilf.atilf.fr/academie9.htm> (last updated on 26 October 2007) with its English equivalent being “sufficiency of qualification; capacity to deal adequately with a subject” (Oxford English Dictionary Online).

Cf. the definition of “expertise” elaborated in the Appeals Chamber’s jurisprudence in the context of expert testimony: “a skill or knowledge acquired through training” (Nahimana et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 198) and “specialized knowledge regarding a technical, scientific, or otherwise discrete set of ideas or concepts that is expected to lie outside these two scenarios.⁴⁸ Indeed, various other circumstances may still arise during the proceedings which may justify the Appellant's participation in the examination.⁴⁹

23. In light of the Appeals Chamber's findings above, it need not consider the remainder of the Appellant's arguments.

IV. DISPOSITION

24. For the foregoing reasons, the Appeals Chamber GRANTS the Appeal IN PART, QUASHES the Trial Chamber's finding on the definition of "specific expertise", UPHOLDS the remainder of the Impugned Decision and DISMISSES the rest of the Appeal.

⁴⁹ Cf. Prosecutor v. Momčilo Krajišnik, Case No. IT-00-39-T where the Trial Chamber allowed Momčilo Krajišnik to put questions to witnesses as "an experiment" to consider whether or not to allow him to represent himself (T. 13439; T.17205). See also Prosecutor v. Ferdinand Nahimana et al., Case No. ICTR-99-52-T where the Trial Chamber accorded Hassan Ngeze the permission to cross-examine witnesses (under the control of the Chamber) as a temporary measure pending the consideration of his request for the withdrawal of his counsel (T. 15 May 2001, pp. 95-96); or – on a different occasion – allowed him to put additional questions to the witness through the Chamber on the basis of – otherwise unidentified – exceptional circumstances, provided that the questions were relevant and admissible (T. 27 November 2001, pp. 1-8); or allowed Hassan Ngeze to sit next to his Co-Counsel so as to participate actively in the cross-examination (T. 4 July 2002, pp. 3-12). The Appeals Chamber has found no error in the approach taken by the latter Trial Chamber (Nahimana et al. Appeal Judgement, paras 266-276).
